Working with acrylics on canvas, I create vibrant images from Eastern Ontario where I live. I paint the natural environment that surrounds me.

My work is an ongoing process of discovery – starting with the observation of some aspect of the natural world that I bring to life through my personal interpretation and style.

My paintings reflect my fascination with the interaction between light, colour, pattern in water and landscape. Because of the many layers of design in the transparency of water, the possibilities are endless. I work to capture these mesmerizing qualities with bold colour and solid design.

I have been painting for most of my life while working full time as a social worker. When I retired in 2015, I began to paint full time after downsizing to a rural home near Perth, Ontario. I built a studio in the woods and began to explore painting in an in-depth way.
